Hang it, man, the famous Landis decision. fining the Standard Oil $29,000,000, the news reached one of Mr. Flagler's trust-ed lieutenants. He went into Mr. Flag-ler's office to tell him about it. This man knows more about Mr. Flagler's nasiness than any other living man and has been with him many years. Nevertheless be thought it wise to carry a bunch of papers, as a sort of excuse for being also the bearer of news. Think of it! Yet he was, after all, afraid to speak about the decision and was going out without saying a word. But at the door be turned and, in desperation, blurted out: 'To tell you the truth, Mr. Flagler, I really came in to tell you that Harness Shop by the Bridge, East Barre. Judge Grosscup has reversed the Land-is decision. The $29,000,000 fine does not stand. Now, Mr. Flagler had said is decision. The $29,000,000 fine does not stand. Now, Mr. Flagler had said all along that the fine was gross injustice. He felt very strongly about it. For a moment he looked as if he were going to say something. But he merely nodded and then said casually: 'Mr. do you happen to have those Whitehall plumbing bills handy! """Flagler and plumbing bills handy!
